The Maple Leaf ONE YEAR for $1.00.

The Montreal Daily Herald 3.00. And a Splendid Picture of King Edward VII. .50. Total $4.50.

ALL FOR $1.75. This is the greatest combination offer ever made by any Canadian journal, and we are anxious to secure the exclusive privilege for this district. The Daily Herald is one of Canada's great papers, established in 1868, and has been the leading Liberal paper of Eastern Canada. It is now a first class newspaper, each day giving full news of the world, and also devoting much space to matters of regular interest to the family. Its commercial intelligence is complete and reliable. THE KING'S PORTRAIT is the best ever published in Canada, and will make a handsome addition to the walls of any library. It is produced by a new process, and is not one of the cheap colored portraits so common. As the regular price of The Herald is $2.00 a year, the liberality of our offer is self-evident.

FROM "OLLIE" REINER. Mr. Albert E. Reiner, in writing the editor of this paper, announces his arrival at Spokane, Wash., in a well worded, breezy letter. He writes graphically of his experiences from the time he left London until he arrived at his far-away destination. Passing so rapidly through large cities, over prairies and through mountains, he says, brought forcibly to his mind the interesting debate he attended last winter when the Maple Leaf club discussed "city and country life." He spent several hours in Chicago and gives a description of the city as he saw it from an observatory at the top of a 23 story building 350 feet high. "There," he writes "is the lake on the east, bordered with beautiful boulevards while the lake itself is literally covered with boats, yachts and steamers. Opposite the lake from my tower I saw just below me the immense city stretching as far as the eye could reach into the smoke which pours from the thousands of factory funnels on all sides. The miriads of people away below me looked like little dots swarming along the long streets, while miles and miles of elevated railways stretched everywhere. I never before realized what was meant by 'a city is a lone-some place.' Here before me were millions, all strangers to me, and all apparently in too big a hurry to look to one side if a man beside them got killed. Below me stretched the river, spanned by bridges which were constantly swinging, or folding themselves up, to allow vessels to pass up and down stream, while church spires and sky-scrappers reached up into the sky around me in all directions as if they had literally been squeezed into the air by the pressure of buildings around them."

Further along his journey, after he left St. Paul, Minn., his experiences were much different. "The country in Montana begins to look like 'the wild and woolly west' that I had read about. Passing along the Yellowstone river we would dip into a canyon with rocky walls close to the track and hundreds of feet high, then turning some sharp point we would dash into a town teeming with people and business excitement. In a moment we would be off again. Then a timber country would appear, lined with miles of saw mills; then we seemed to drift into the mountains where one has to look upwards to see ahead. Gazing at these giants I felt that I could go up 'Greenwood's hill,' near Wellesley, in two steps. From the top of these mountains we obtained views of wild scenery upon which the eye could feast for hours with delight. Then we rushed downwards from the mountains to a country which became more and more level as we neared my destination—Spokane. This is a large and lively city, and while I have not yet, and never will, get over my liking for my native village of Wellesley, yet I am hard at work and enjoying myself immensely."

A. E. REINER.

A WINNING TRICK.

He Lost All His Own and Made Money by Doing So.
The captain of one rather old and slow steamer of years ago, finding that he would have to be a long time in China before he received a full cargo of tea and would have probably to return in ballast, began, to every one's astonishment, to say that, owing to the repairs that had been done to his engines, he hoped to make a racing passage back to England. Then, still more to the astonishment of the captains of the fast steamers and the world at large, he commenced to back himself to make the fastest passage home.

In such very considerable sums of money did he wager that people began to think there was something in it, and the merchants sent their tea almost entirely to his ship, arguing that as the captain stood to lose £500 the repairs to his steamer's engines had probably put him in a position to bet almost on a certainty.

Of course the steamer, whose greatest speed was eight knots an hour, arrived in England weeks after the others, and the captain lost £250, but instead of having to lie in China waiting his chance of cargo coming in from the interior, a probable delay of weeks, he had cleared in a few days, and as his bets became known to the public with a full ship, thus recouping to his owners, who of course paid his betting losses, a considerable number of thousands of pounds profit.

They Use Morphine.

"Snakes of many poisonous varieties can be handled without danger if the handling is done properly," says a dealer in animals. "Most people imagine that snake charmers handle only non-poisonous snakes, or snakes with the poison sacs removed, but such is not always the case. I have seen snake charmers fearlessly handle reptiles of the deadliest variety without apparent danger to themselves, the snakes in fact making no attempt to bite. A snake does not bite unless angered, and snake charmers are expert in their handling to soothe the animal instead of alarming it. They generally begin their manipulation by stroking and avoid all sudden movement in handling the snake. Most snake charmers I have come in contact with were morphine fiends, and by the absorption of this poison they were impervious to the poison of any but the most deadly variety of snakes."

Two Gifts to the Orchestra.

On one occasion, when Von Bulow had to conduct an orchestral concert at which a piece written by an aristocratic amateur was to be performed, the composer requested permission to direct a rehearsal and on obtaining it opened a parcel containing seventy pencils, which he handed to the members of the band, asking them to mark his intentions in their parts, as he would give them by way of memento.

Hans von Bulow noted this matter of detail and left the hall. Presently he returned, also with a parcel, and on resuming his place at the desk gravely handed out seventy pieces of india rubber, with which the players were to erase the directions which the composer had given them.

Mushroom Tests.

There are two sure ways of telling the difference between wholesome mushrooms and the poisonous fungi which so closely resemble them. If they are to be boiled, put an onion with them, and if the onion remains white there is nothing to fear. If it turns black, throw away the contents of the dish, for poison lurks there. A common test is to sprinkle a little salt on the pink underpart, and if it turns black you have real mushrooms. If the pink changes to yellow, you have a danger signal before. If precautions like these were taken with all mushrooms, fresh or canned, there would be less sickness in the world.

The Cocoa Plantation.

A traveler in South America, where the cocoa tree is largely cultivated, speaks of the great care with which the young plants have to be protected from the sun, which, if very strong, is fatal to them. To secure this protection the planters shield them by banana trees and plantain trees, the broad leaves of which give them the needed shade. And even when they are fully grown, they need protection, which is given by trees known as "immortals," or, as the planters call them, "the mother of the cocoa." Thus the whole cocoa plantation has a sort of canopy.

An Odd Habit Among Rooks.

Among the odd habits of rooks is the way that members of the same rookery have of intermarrying generation after generation. The males always choose their wives from among their near neighbors, and if one should be so bold as to bring home to his rookery a bride from a distance the other rooks will invariably refuse to receive her and will force the pair to build some way off in the neighborhood of big rookeries onlyling nests of this kind may always be found.

Fresh Paint Stains.

A fresh paint stain on woollen goods will disappear if rubbed against other woollen goods. For instance, if the stain is on the sleeve of a coat take that garment off and rub the paint against the other sleeve. It will disappear and leave no sign. This is easier than applying turpentine and exactly as efficacious, but it must be done while the paint is still wet.

Opera House, Wellesley
Friday and Saturday,
June 13 and 14.

The Great Raymond Co.

Under the Auspices of the Wellesley Branch.

Dancing, Songs, Slack Wire Acts,
Magic Work, Athletics, Mysteries, etc., by Six Performers.

The great Raymond Co. opened their five nights engagement to one of the largest audiences of the season, and Mr. Raymond proved himself one of the cleverest magicians that ever visited Berlin. His travesty on spiritualism, as he calls it, sent the people into rous of laughter and his work in this line will never be forgotten. The performance was continuous and the vaudeville support very clever and the show bids fair to break the record.—Berlin Daily News-Record, May 29th, 1902.

The great Raymond Show was the finest of the kind that has ever played in the Berlin Opera House. Mr. Maurice Raymond is one of the greatest entertainers that has ever visited this part of the country. Polished, humorous, original, he produced hearty applause. The vaudeville part of the show was good and the show was very popular.—Berlin Daily Telegraph, May 29, 1902.

Admission, 25c. and 15c.

A STORY OF BROWNING.

The Poet Was Just as Well as Generous With His Servant.

On a certain day Big Willie met one of the boys who were boys. It was a boy who was a little taller and a rather heavy looking fellow. He had a rather heavy looking face, and other fruit on his face.

"Well, Giuseppe," he said, "let me help you." And he took the basket and went to the door.

The woman, overwhelmed by such good-natured attention, "Thank you, Giuseppe," she said.

"No, no," said the poet, "You are the one helping me. Won't you allow me for once to help you?"

"I'll be glad to do so," said the woman, "but I don't know what to do with it. It is so heavy for such a young fellow."

"This was more than he could bear. He went up to the second floor, took the basket, and walking his feet for who could walk and his will to find one handle on the basket until they reached the ground floor.

This same worthy woman is fond of relating a story of her master which illustrates another side of his character. He had paid her weekly wages, and there remained 1 cent more as change. The woman showed the little coin, saying shyly, "I cannot offer this trifle to the signora."

"Yes, my good Giuseppina," he said, taking it from her hand; "it is one thing to be just and another to be generous. You do richly return it to me."

"And not long after this," continues the woman, "he made me such a grand present!"

His Wife Were Woolgatherer.

The aforementioned professor, says the Norwegian Weekly Tidnings, suddenly arose from his rocking chair, looked his feet up on his forehead and went toward his wife with the expression and air of a man who at last had come to a final decision.

"Now, listen to me, wife," he said, "and I do not want you to oppose me, do you hear?"

"Yes, dear. What is it, then?"

"Now, no opposition, mind. I wish the boy to be an engineer."

"But, my dear, what are you talking about? We haven't any boy."

"Oh, yes, that is so. I had forgotten that," said the professor as he resumed his seat in the rocking chair.

A Quick Cure For Bee Stings.

First pull the sting from the flesh, then bruise the fresh leaves of the common weed known as vervain and rub the wound well with them, after which bind it in a plaster of the crushed leaves well moistened. This will prevent swelling and ease the pain. Vervain may be used in its dried state by steeping the leaves in hot water. It is gathered in September by negro nurses in the south and hung up to dry for winter use.—Ladies' Home Journal.

When a Man Weighs Less.

A man weighs less when the barometer is high, notwithstanding the fact that the atmospheric pressure on him is more than when the barometer is low. As the pressure of air on an ordinary sized man is about fifteen tons, the rise of the mercury from twenty-five to thirty-one inches adds about one ton to the load he has to carry.

Doubtful Praise.

Miss Upperees—The audience went wild over my singing. I had to repeat my song no less than four times.

Mrs. Oldtimer—Why, that's just the time they used to make over me at school. I've known the time when the teacher made me say my lesson over half a dozen times.

He Had Them.

Dr. Joanes—I say, waiter, I believe you've got palpitation of the heart, haven't you?

Waiter—Yes, sir, and they're uncommon nice today, sir. Will you try some, sir?

The Lion Bridge, near Samsung, in China, is the longest in the world, being five and a quarter miles from end to end. The roadway is seventy feet above water.

The Life of Circus People.

Circus people are pretty clammy. From generation to generation they are circus people, and the generations do not perish from off the face of the earth nearly so fast as the insurance companies seem to think. There are plenty of good performers that will never see sixty again and some that are seventy-five years old and still as supple as you could wish for a man fifty years younger. More than in any other branch of the amusement business is the family life kept up, for every woman travels with a circus and must have a natural protector with her. If it isn't a father or a brother, it must be a husband, and as circuses don't carry people around with them just for the pleasure of their company the women marry in the profession and bring up their children in it. The little boy you see riding around so gaily on his daddy's head has to learn his lessons here just the same as if he went to school.—Woman's Home Companion.

EXERCISE AND EATING.

Remember That a Tired Stomach Is a Weak Stomach.

A good dinner at night is necessary for those whose pleasure or work keeps them up very late. But for ordinary folk who dine at 6 or 7 and go to bed at 10:30 only a light wholesome repast should be taken at the end of the day, when muscles and nerves are more or less exhausted.

"A tired stomach is a weak stomach" is a golden rule to remember. Yet how often we hear people say, "I've been rushing about all day and am tired to death; I must have a big meal to make up for it." You may put the big meal into the stomach, but you cannot make the stomach digest it.

A belief lives strong in the hearts and minds of the majority of mankind, including persons of weak digestions, that a quick brisk walk taken before a meal goes up an appetite and helps the stomach to digest the food. Now, this is exactly what it doesn't do. Exercise spreads the blood throughout the body. For the proper digestion of food the blood is needed in the stomach. Do realize this important fact.

After a long, exhausting walk, bicycling spin or any severe physical or mental strain take a good half hour's rest in a comfortable armchair or lying on a sofa before you eat a substantial meal.

A Telephone Whistle.

When the cappiece of a telephone receiver is held to the mouthpiece of the transmitter, a more or less shrill tone or whistle is heard in the receiver. This occurs when the apparatus is in good working condition and when the transmitter is on short circuit. This effect is seemingly due to a series of reactions analogous to but much more complex than those which occur in an electric bell when its circuit is closed. A movement of the diaphragm of the receiver toward its magnet tends to weaken the pressure on the carbon of the transmitter, which causes a weakening of the current, allowing the diaphragm to fall away, with the further result that the air column is compressed, increasing the pressure on the carbon again and also increasing current strength, whereby the diaphragm is again attracted, and this action is repeated over and over again.

The Human Mouth.

It has been discovered that the human mouth is slowly but surely and steadily moving toward the left of the face, which will in time bring it somewhere in the neighborhood of the left ear. All the five great races of man have an uncontrollable tendency to eat only with the teeth which grow from the left jaws. This wears out the left teeth more rapidly than those on the right side of the mouth, and this in turn gives the upper and lower jaws an inclination toward the left.

It is the expressed opinion of many scientists who are foremost in the world's roll of professional honor that in the course of time the human causes above mentioned will have completely changed its position and that it will then be situated rather nearer the left ear than to the nose.

Oriental Rugs.

"Oriental rugs" says a New York dealer, "are nearly as standard as gold. When an auctioneer sells you one for $200, you may think you are getting it cheap, but you can get it at about the same price from any reputable dealer. Every rug house has its agents at auctions, who pay nightly close to the market price for the genuine article. When you have had an oriental rug for ten or fifteen years, it is worth more than when you bought it, provided it is in good condition. It is then an antique. When you hear of any one buying second-hand oriental rugs at about one-third or one-quarter of their value, you may safely wager that they have been patched."
