MILL STARTED.

The Wellesley Roller Mill started grinding flour last Tuesday, after a couple of months idleness while renovations and repairs were being made which makes it a practically new mill on the most modern principles. The mill now contains six sets of double rolls, giving an increased capacity of 25 barrels per day. Two new Universal rolls have been added, with eight sets of screens each; four funnels and three patent dust and screenings collectors, and a rolling screw wheat collector are among the prominent additions of machinery while the large storey added at the top of the building is occupied almost entirely by elevators, etc. The Excel lightning chopper has been running several weeks, and gives the highest satisfaction to the farmers as a money saver and a time saver. The alterations in the mill were under the charge of Mr. H. W. Cox, of the Stratford Mill Building Co., assisted by Messrs. Thomas Kelly and Joseph Lehman, of Stonnville. These gentlemen made themselves very popular during their stay in our village.

The staff of workmen in the mill are Fred Debas, manager; Seth Colcoe, head miller; Henry Koeder and Fred Mayer, millers; Chas. Bicket, engineer. There are about 10,000 bushels of wheat stored in the mill, and the highest prices are paid every day for all kinds of grain. Wellesley now has as well equipped and up-to-date a roller mill as can be found in Ontario. The expense has been a heavy one, and the Milling Co. has shown great enterprise in the matter.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The resignation of Lord Salisbury as Premier of England caused a sensation all over the world where the news was made known early this week. The Marquis of Salisbury has been Prime Minister since 1895, during which period he has proven himself one of the strongest men of the times guiding British interests safely through many a crisis and conducting the South African affair with the greatest skill. It has been known for some that he desired to retire from his arduous and responsible position but no one was aware of his determination to do so immediately until the official announcement was made. He has the confidence of all classes in Great Britain and his retirement is, no doubt, caused by his advancing age. He is succeeded in the Premiership by the Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, a well-known and tried politician of great ability, a leader in the House, although he has not met with the best of success in commanding the undivided sympathies of his follower. A fall meeting of the British Parliament has been decided upon.

The newspaper puns worked off on the accident that befel Sandford recently in the well near Paris, are of an awful nature and should be suppressed. There are enough of them to fill both wells, and foul enough to asphyxiate a whole township.

General Kitchener is returning to England from South Africa and his welcome promises to eclipse that of Lord Roberts, "Little Bobs," a year or so ago. The ovations given these great leaders are good only so far as they are made to represent the national feeling towards the entire army engaged in the war. But the tendency of these home welcomings appear to be a hero worship of the leaders, forgetting the men behind the guns, who sacrificed life, health and limbs in that sturdy determination which made the success for which the masses give the generals all the credit.

But all generals don't get the honors which are heaped upon Kitchener and Roberts. Gen. Buller with a little army was marching to the relief of Ladysmith. He came to what appeared to be impassable mountains apparently alive with an entrenched enemy of tremendous numbers. For a moment his humanity mastered and he sent those messages to save his little army from being butchered. What mattered it that he afterwards fought his way over those mountains, relieved the exhausted troops at Ladysmith and thus broke the back of the rebellion! His fight was one of the most stupendous and heroic on record, yet that great march of heroism and endurance is forgotten and only the message he sent when annihilation appeared to stare his brave soldiers in the face is remembered, and he is a so-called disgraced man in England to-day, while Kitchener is fairly steeped in glory. Truly, the fortunes of war are varied.

Following closely on the news of the retirement of Lord Salisbury comes the report that Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Chancellor of the British Exchequer, has also resigned. He has been a prominent and honored figure in British history for many years and has performed his duties with remarkable ability.

King Edward is now nearly reached complete recovery and the date of his coronation is to be fixed for the early part of August. The ceremony and festivities will not be on so grand a scale as the June coronation would have had, but no will be just as firmly crowned and the hoodoo which have surrounded this event will be "busted" all the same.

A Stratford man has discovered a process by which potatoes can be dried and converted into a flaky form much resembling rolled oatmeal. This is calculated to obviate a great deal of the expense and difficulty which is now experienced in shipping, the bulk of the potatoes, being reduced four-fifths. Another advantage is that the climate will not affect them in the least, and they can be kept for an indefinite length of time. If his plan is successful it will revolutionize the potato market.
