EDITORIAL NOTES.

Berlin is now agitating for a pork packing house. These Berlinites have a habit of getting what they reach out for, so the pork-raisers of this section may look out for a home market in the near future.

Berlin wanted C.P.R. connection; it will be there this fall. They wanted a beet sugar factory; it will be ready by the time the beets are. It wanted to be a man-facturing center; the streets of the county town are lined with such industries. In fact there are but few places in the Province which have seen what they needed and went about so systematically and energetically to supply itself. Opposition from the obstructionists at home only seems to whet the appetite of the pushers.

Just now Berlin is casting sly glances at the Wellesley District, seeing the immense benefit they would derive from being in railway touch with us. The spie; they sent out have returned saying this is a goodly land flowing with milk and honey, and the prospects are that they will come over and possess it. If they adorn themselves with pork and sugar beet factories, and dangle before us a market connection with the seaboard, their wooing will be reciprocated.

Their little "love spat" is over and the Stafford Herald and Mitchell Recorder once more have their arms entwined round each other's necks. That's sweet of you, neighbors; the quarrel was getting tiresome.

Manitoba is doing very well this year for a youngster, but Ontario can still give the Prairie Province cards and spades on general prosperity.

On the fourth of December next the electors of Ontario are to perform a farce entitled "Prohibition Plebiscite." The letter P has figured in many a farce in Ontario of late years. There have been the P. I., the P. P. A., and others, besides one or two like the one now before us.

And now come the days of fall "Show-Fairs" and belated trains. For eleven months of the year (excepting, of course, the Easter and Christmas holiday weeks) the rail road time tables are lived up to with considerable accuracy. But when the big exhibitions are on all the schedules are sent flying to the winds, and a train not more than two hours late is considered to be making pretty good time. The principal sufferers from this are the country evening dailies which cannot go to press until the very latest telegraphic news comes in, per express, from the boiler-plate factories. Next to these come the trainmen who are kept on very long hours because passengers are never in a hurry to get on and off cars at stations. The railway companies, too, are heavy losers, and the man who can present a plan that will keep trains on time during the exhibition-time pack of travel will find himself very popular with the train dispatchers.

Pins in England.

In England the ordinary domestic pin had become in the fifteenth century an article of sufficient importance to warrant legislative notice. An act of parliament passed in 1483 prohibited the importation of pins. As a necessity of the toilet pins were introduced into England in the latter part of the fifteenth century by Catherine Howard, queen of Henry VIII., who received them from France.

Very good pins of brass were made at this period, but a large portion of them were made of iron, which was blanched and sold for brass pins. In order to prevent this imposition upon the good people of England parliament in 1493 passed an act providing that "no person shall put to sale any pins but such as shall be double headed and have the heads soldered fast to the shanks of the pins, well smoothed, the shanks well shaped, the points well rounded, filed, chiselled and sharpened." For a long time it depended upon France for its supply of pins till the year 1628, when John Tilsby introduced the manufacture into Gloucestershire. In 1636 the manufacture was introduced into Bristol and Birmingham, the latter place ultimately becoming the great center of the industry.

A Matter of Sex.

"A man trimmed that window," remarked a dealer in women's headgear, passing a millinery establishment on Twenty-third street in which all the hats and bonnets faced squarely toward the sidewalk. "I saw a woman fixed up the windows in that store," continued the man milliner as he came to the next store, in which the women's hats showed their backs, with their bows, pendent ribbons and streamers.

"You see," he said, "a man looks at a woman's face, and so it is only the front of the hat that he sees, and he doesn't know any better than to show the fronts when he is exhibiting hats for sale."

"But it is women, not men, who are the buyers, and they know that their women friends when they meet them smile sweetly as they pass and then turn and critically inspect their hats from the rear."

"So women select hats with stunning blind effects, and the woman milliner judiciously shows the rear elevation when she puts a hat on exhibition."—New York Times.

A Modest Request.

To judge from an incident reported in the Washington correspondence of the New York Tribune, the department of agriculture sometimes appears from a distance like a big department store. During the season when members of congress bend out seeds, one of the packages found its way back to the sender, accompanied by a note from the farmer to whom it had been addressed.

"My dear sir," wrote the farmer, "I appreciate your good will in sending the seeds, but my eldest daughter, Matilda, is going to marry the doctor down by the village next month, and wife and I think of giving up the farm and going there to live. If we do, the seeds wou'd be much good, as we shan't have a garden; so if you could change them for some stockings (No 9) and some handkerchiefs or a nice spring bonnet for Matilda, I would be much obliged."

A Juvenile Feminine Prayer.

A little girl was spending the summer at a fashionable watering place, and one morning as she played upon the veranda of the hotel where her mother was stopping she heard a lengthy conversation upon the fashions of the day and the absolute necessity of stylishness in dress if one hoped to be a success in society. One lady went so far as to say that stylishness was far more important than beauty.

That night as the child said her usual prayer she added, with great earnestness, "And, oh, dear Lord do please make me stylish!"

AN EXPERIMENT.

For the next few weeks—during the balance of the dull harvest season—we propose issuing the Maple Leaf in its present 4-page form with a view of getting the feeling of our subscribers as to a local paper being devoted to home news with up regard to the size of sheet. If the experiment meets with general approval the price of the paper will be lowered and arrangements made for low-priced clubbing rates with Canada's big newspapers. We will be glad to get the candid opinions of our subscribers on this matter.

LOCAL NEWS.

Wellesley Fall Show
Sept. 16th and 17th.
Are you getting ready for it?
Only one week from next Tuesday and Wednesday.

This year's exhibit promises to be the biggest in its history, and the Band is preparing the jolliest Fair-night concert ever held in Wellesley.

"Billy" McLeod, Scotland's crack cornetist, will play with the Brass Band at the Wellesley Fall Show.

The Misses Engelter, of Berlin and Heideberg, spent Sunday and Monday in the village the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ratz.

Miss Mary Wolfe, from Mishawauk, Ind., is at present spending a couple of weeks the guest of her cousin, Miss Bertha Lenhard.

Mr. Ed. Bauman, of Preston, returned home this week after spending a few days the guest of his cousins, the Misses Fleischhauer.

Messrs. Ed. Smith, of the Section Line, and Fred. Ehnes, of North Easthope, left for Manitoba on the harvest excursion last Monday, expecting to be absent a couple of months.

If the threshing machine men are making money these days in proportion to the way they are working, they'll all be millionaires by Christmas. But in order to keep up with the demands on them the have to squeeze in about 20 hours work every day. Some of them wish the earth could be arranged for a few weeks like the moon where every day is a month long.

On Tuesday afternoon last Mr. Jos. Kennel was getting a load of straw to his stable, on the South Side, and in turning the sharp corner at Mr. Altman's residence the load upset. Mr. Kennel slid to the ground easily, but the young man with him, a lad named S. Habach, came down heavily and it was at first thought he was seriously hurt as he was bleeding profusely, but it afterwards developed that beyond a bruised nose and a shaking up the boy was all right. The team belonged to Mr. Jonas Bushort, with whom young Schlabach is working.

NEW BOILER.

The old boiler at the Wellesley roller mill is this week being replaced by a new one of over 100 horse power capacity. The work is in charge of Mr. Thos. Maitland, an engineer from the shops in London. A large force of workmen are engaged and it is expected that the man will be raised in the new boiler next Monday.

Miss Dobson, of Toronto, is the guest of Mrs. Hills.

Mr. G. Doersam, of Guelph, was visiting relatives in town on Labor Day.

Messrs. Ed. Reiner and A. J. Saunders were in Toronto for a few days this week.

Miss Annette Ottmann is enjoying a visit with her brother in Toronto this week.

Union Sunday School next Sunday at 10.30 a.m. English preaching service at 7 p.m.

Messrs. H. H. Ziegler and Jacob Drumm, of Waterloo, spent Labor Day with their families here.

Messrs. Grebenstein, of Buffalo, and Tafel, of Berlin, are guests at Mr. J. N. Zinkann's at present.

Messrs. H. Feick and Frank McDermott, of Tavistock, are in town this week assisting in putting the new boiler in position at the roller mill.

Mr. C. Schelter, of Jordan, Ont., was shaking hands with his many friends in the village while paying a labor-day visit to his aged mother here.

Mrs. E. L. Bice, who has been visiting with her parents near London during the holidays, returned to her home in this village on Monday last.

Hastings Bros., of Crosshill, are exhibiting their magnificent Leicester sheep and Shorthorn cattle at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition this week.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Duench, in this village, was made glad last Friday by the arrival of a bright baby boy.

Mr. Henry Cook has completely recovered from his recent attack of appendicitis. He has returned from Tavistock and resumed work at the roller mill.

Linwood drew a large number of people on the occasion of their civic holiday last Thursday. Our senior base ball team's capture of the trophy was quite popular.

The residence property in this village belonging to the estate of the late Mrs. Heipel, was offered for sale by public auction last Saturday but the bids not being high enough the property was not sold. Mr. H. Altman was the lucky purchaser of the wood.

The choir of the Missouri Lutheran church in this village were selected to take charge of the singing at the Missionary Festival in Berlin last Sunday. They enjoyed the occasion very much except for a drenching on the way home after the evening service.

Posters will be out this week giving particulars of the great comic concert which the Wellesley Brass Band is preparing for the evening of the second day of the Wellesley Fall Show. Mr. Wm. McLeod, whose "Calligan, Call Again," made such a hit here last Spring, will be one of the entertainers, as will also the southern favorite, Ben Witmer, of Bright, who is said to be a pocket edition of the great Jim Fax. "On Fair night people want fun," is an old truism, and the Band boys have decided to fill that want.

LABOR DAY SPORTS.

Business was suspended here on Labor Day. A great many of our citizens enjoyed the sports at New Hamburg, Milverton, Baden, Berlin and other places.

Our Junior base ball team went to Baden and played the Juniors of that village, winning a very nice game by a score of 15 to 6. The boys were used well and had a most enjoyable time.

Our tennis team fared not so well at New Hamburg that day, but they were "up against it," having as one of their opponents a crack Illinois player in the person of Mr. Umbach, of Napierville. Our boys acquitted themselves very creditably, however. The record was: Messrs. Umbach and Ruby (N.H.) beat Messrs. Jas. Kerr and Eck. Reiner (W) 8-6, 6-3, 10-8.

It is expected that these New Hamburg gentlemen will be here to play a week from next Saturday.

It is made in the Nordheimer Piano Factory, by the most skilled workmen that money can hire, and is recognized everywhere as the Leading Piano of THIS COUNTRY.

Lenard and we employ agents handling very often a low class of Pianos, are frequently known to make useless statements and list this truly excellent instrument, knowing that wherever the Nordheimer is offered for sale and merit is left to win, their chances of selling their poorer class of Pianos is gone. Of course those same dealers know there is a much larger profit in selling the cheap pianos as is evidenced by the fact that they never sell two at the same price, but take all they can get from every one they deal with. # MANY MEN of MANY MINDS

By EDITH WYATT

Copyright, 1901, by S. S. McClure Company

In the northwestern part of Chicago, not far east of the river, in a place of silent streets and empty lots, stand several large frame houses, with picket fences, built before the fire. Tall poplar and cottonwood trees hang clouds of pale, shimmering foliage over the wooden sidewalks. An occasional electric car with one or two passengers shrills past under the rustling shade, and cows are sometimes pastured on the frequent brown lawns.

In one of the American cities of this place there lived two gentlemen, quite different as the names, Judge Amos Parker and Mr. Paul Haviland. Judge Parker, the house owner, an old settler, was a plain man, the father of a large family.

His wife had died when the children were little. His sons were gone into business in distant towns, and his daughters, combining piety and flirtation in a neighboring church, had sported actively through their respective courtships till they were all married and gone, and their father was left alone with Edna, the servant girl, and Nick, her brother, who had accompanied the family when they moved from Indiana forty years ago.

Judge Parker was a ponderous, easy-going man, of the type of a man of information, with a long white face and almost no nerves. He scarcely perceived the loneliness of his home, and he did not miss his family too sensitively, as when they were with him he had them only very slightly acquainted with them.

His taste was not for men as individuals, but in bulk. He loved the public and public life, and he would have preferred almost any discomfort out of doors or in a hall to sitting in a parlor through an evening.

The Judge could not for an instant bear exclusive society. Indeed, the only moment when he experienced loneliness was when he was forced into the presence of a group of people selected by a delicate social tact instead of by the rude hand of chance or political organization. If he had no lecture, no Republican rally or G. A. R. meeting to attend, he would go out and sit on the fence of his grass plot to smoke and to talk to Nick or to any casual loafer.

Paul Haviland, on the other hand, enjoyed almost no society but that of his betrothed, Margaret Alden, and a literary friend, Richard Elliott.

He read law in the law office of Judge Parker's former law firm for three winters. It was during this time that he lived with the Judge, to get far away, he said, from the grime and sordidness of the city, and in the evenings, while the Judge was off with the public in the grime and sordidness, he sat in the old Parker house and wrote long introspective letters to Margaret Alden and composed verses called "Retrospect," "recumbences" or "I Ch" which gave its name to his volume of collected verse.

IF
If I had known—had—there it is!
What does it matter?
Yet this pressed spray of cicemata
Again reminds me how—
But, never mind the one and past.
What does it matter now?
Had you but spoken or I not stayed
There on the lawn with her
This cicemata had been, I wis,
A different messenger.
Perhaps—hail! ho! The play is done—
And you in Peshawur.

If they had told me what was true
Or I had eyes to see,
Ereest had gone or it been you
There on the lawn with me—
Bah! What's the odds? Or rose or rue—
What is the odds to me?

Richard Elliott wrote a preface almost entirely of margins for the book, commenting favorably on the restraint, suggestiveness and perfect good breeding of Mr. Haviland's lines, and Paul had great fun in his own way in writing them in the evenings, while the Judge had great fun in his own way in seconding motions and introducing politicians in long, heavy addresses at political clubs.

It was a curious circumstance of Paul's art that, while he himself was of a very sensitive and impressive nature, the attitude he chose to assume in his verse, one described by Richard Elliott in a magazine article on "Haviland and Indifference," was exactly Judge Parker's attitude, and that gentleman might have asked with far more sincerity:

Bah! What's the odds? Or rose or rue—
What is the odds to me?

In the spring of Paul Haviland's stay at the old Parker house Margaret Alden came to visit Chicago, and at the time of her visit she and her lover passed through a long period of mental suffering.

Their trouble arose on the day of a heavy spring rain. There were to have met in the Art Institute, and Paul Haviland, supposing that Margaret Alden would not keep her tryst in the worst storm of the year, had not kept his.

He was overwhelmed with contrition at his mistake when he visited her in the evening.

But when he said, "It never occurred to me that you would be there," and she replied, "Where there is a question I always do the more strenuous thing," he was wounded. He disliked being less strenuous than any one, even than Margaret Alden. He did not enjoy himself in her presence as he ordinarily did, and he began thinking that the first beauty of their feeling had vanished and wrote verses called

"The Lost Treasure," "Ashes" and "Disillusionment."

Meanwhile Margaret wrote in her diary:

"April 14.
"Paul was here today, but not the Paul of yesterday. Something is gone between us—just what I cannot say, but something."
"He has, of course, failed me and can never be again to me if it was before his inconsideration of today."
"Do I really love him when I cannot any longer perfectly admire him? Must question myself further on it is plain."
"It is true I am disillusioned, but I feel it more dignified on the whole to keep our relations as they have always been. The world need not know."
"This is not sincere, of course, but I am disturbed and in doubt."
Paul Haviland, too, was disturbed and in doubt, and it was while he was in this mood that he went one morning to the law office and found, with astonishment, that a blow had fallen on Judge Parker.

He had been responsible for a brother living in Wisconsin, a bank cashier, who, after a long probate, had absconded with the bank funds, leaving behind enough debts to ruin the Judge.

The man in the office said that if such a thing had to happen to some one it might as well happen to Judge Parker, as he never took anything bad.

Paul felt the incident, an instance of the injustice of life, already symbolized to him in his own wrongs. He mentioned his friend's disaster to Margaret in the evening, considering it an episode in keeping with the melancholy tone of their meeting, but they talked very little about it, being still too occupied with their own delicate, moral and temperamental problems.

However, when Paul went home that night and saw the Judge sitting on the front steps with his hat on the back of his head talking to Nick as he had before his house was disgraced and his fortunes ruined, he felt among his own troubles a sense of sympathy for a fellow sufferer.

As he passed he touched the Judge's coat sleeve lightly, as a subtle sign of respect, but his intention was evidently quite imperceptible to the Judge, for the next morning at breakfast he observed ruminatively with an air of intelligent, judicial interest:

"Well, Paul, do you hear about Brother Will?"

Paul stared at his plate and then said delicately, "In life we cannot always account for everything."
"That's what the bank directors think," returned the Judge jocosely. "Well, it's a queer thing—a mighty queer thing. I knew a man who did something like it here—and he resembled Brother Will too."
This was the only allusion the Judge ever made to the matter. Everything in the old Parker house remained as it was before Brother Will's lapse. The Judge had never been extravagant. He was not obliged to change in any way his domestic or social customs, and it will be seen that his spirits and life had been less affected by his ruin than had Paul Haviland's by the remotest shadow of adverse criticism.

Perhaps this sketch will be supposed too decided in its contrasts to be a thing of facts. On the other hand, it may be truthfully said that it is a very moderate presentation of the vivid variety of persons, perhaps in the world; certainly on the north side of Chicago.

It has been proved, beyond the possibility of a doubt, by the leading Scientific Men of the day, that to Lengthen Life, and to keep in a state of perfect Health, you must destroy the Germs of Disease which are constantly accumulating in the system of every living being, and producing all kinds of disease; and there is nothing in the world, they say, so far discovered, that will do this but to get ELECTRICITY INTO THE SYSTEM. Life is too short to suffer pain. We have enough trouble in this world—no use to add pain to our ills; The LIQUID ELECTRICITY is the Lightning Cure for Pain. It is the greatest CURE for Pain, whether internal or external, ever discovered.

We all know that Pain, if long continued, will wreck a general demoralization of the nervous system, producing nervous prostration. Not only does the LIQUID ELECTRICITY Cure all pain, but its administration produces most novel effects upon the sensations, something indescribable, a younger and lighter feeling, a buoyancy of spirits, a happiness of body, elastic step, leaping impulses. The novelty of feeling makes it incredibly nice. Those who find themselves with wretched strength, melancholy thoughts, restless nights, sorrowing and vainly longing for a renewal of life's glorious prime, here find a means of renewing those golden days, when the fire of life burns with brilliancy. The most delicate sensations permeate the body. The Electric Force goes through every vein, every nerve, an unknown feeling comes to the soul, renewing vital prostration, pleasant to the palate, makes young again the aged and feeble, and rejuvenates the old and debilitated.
