EDITORIAL NOTES.

That we are on the eve of Dominion elections is getting more evident every week. The recon-struction of Laurier's Cabinet and Borden's tour equally point to it Mr. Bourassa's statement that he expects to retire from Dominion politics and enter the Quebce parliament shows that while he is posed to a part of Laurier's policy yet he is not prepared to extend that opposition into the general elections which he apparently sees approaching.

The provincial so called "party newspapers present the funniest aspect of a political contest. They throw their whole energies into throw their whole energies into the fight, giving column after column of free advertising without hope of reward or thanks, and the surety of heaps of abuse from the other party, while at the same time a church or philanthronic society has to pay full price per line for an-nouncements. When political or-gans cease their grinding the st-mosphere will be cleared of at the least three-fourths of the corrup-tion of which the suffering public is now compelled to read so much

He is stated to have va-cated his position there by request on account of failure in an attempt to get two trains to pass each other or the same track near the village of Shakespeare. His subsequent efforts in other scientific directions have been much more successful but we have not learned that he has yet solved his original Shakespeare problem.

The "monster potato" freak has now succeded the "big egg" item in country newspapers. You will notice that these abnormal articles are seldom left for the editor's use. Not so very long ago, however, one Not to very long ago, however, one of our northern exchanges wrote: "The other day Jakey Miller jaid an egg on on table of prolligious proportions." A scientific agricultural paper copied the item and wanted to know what kind of a bird Jakey was. It is said Jacob promptly withdrew his patronage from that paper and laid no more eggs there

It seems to be a sure thing that it seems to be a sure fining that sir ships will soon be as commun as automobiles. People walking now-a-days feel fairly safe if there is a fence corner handy to dodge into from the honkers. But if the risk of being caught in a dangling rope or skull-cracked by a falling monkey-wrench is added to his dangers, the storm cellars and iron roofed buildings will be the only safe places for those who travel on
